THE PASTOR SPEAKS

A Working Faith

"What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? Can faith save him?" James 2:14.

Such statements as these from the book of James caused Martin Luther to speak of the book as an "espistle of straw," but James has touched his finger on a vital nerve center of Christianity.

James is asking, "Can a faith that does not produce works be a saving faith?" The only answer is: No, it cannot be. True, faith in Jesus Christ will save, but the faith that saves is a faith that produces something. It is a faith that changes an individual. It is a faith that causes an individual to change others. It is, in short, a faith that produces works in a person's life.

An individual comes into a personal relationship to Jesus Christ by faith in him. That faith in Jesus Christ isn't just a pious fraud. It changes a person; it makes him different. It causes him to bring forth, to produce works. Where those works are absent there is room for doubting that the person has genuine faith. Where those works are present there is visible evidence that Jesus Christ changes men.

Are you a Christian? Good! Then demonstrate it by the type of works which you produce. Have you remained cold, calloused, and indifferent while professing to be a Christian? Then, examine yourself to make sure that you have the real thing in Christianity and not just a fictious substitute for it. Is Is Jesus Christ living in you so that you serve God and help men? Wonderful! Then, you are giving visible evidence to the world that Jesus is your personal savior.

Dr. Thomas D. Lea,
Pastor, Liberty Baptist Church

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

TO BEGIN AGAIN

Lesson for November 16, 1969

Background Scripture: Psalms 126; 137:1-6; Isaiah 40; 49; 51:1-16; Jeremiah 31.
Devotional Reading: Isaiah 51: 1-4.

One winter day in 1945 in the Auschwitz concentration camp, one of the prisoners came to speak to Dr. Viktor Frankl, himself a prisoner there. He told Frankl of an unusual dream. In the dream a voice had told him that he would be granted the privilege of asking any question and that question would be answered. To the dreaming man there was one question above all others. when would he be liberated from the camp? The answer that came to him in the dream was "March thirtieth!"

The Death Of Hope

Assuming the dream to be prophetic, the man lived with eager expectation. But as the end of March drew near, the war news reaching the camp made it seem very unlikely that liberation would come that soon. Thus on March 29, this prisoner suddenly became very ill, running high temperature. On the next day he became delirious, lost consciousness, and by the next day he was dead.

To all appearances, says Frankl, the man died of typhus. Yet there was more to it than that. A man's morale and his ability to fight disease are closely related. "The ultimate cause of my friend's death," says Frankl, "was that the expected liberation did not come and he was severely disappointed. This suddenly lowered his body's resistance against the latent typhus infection. His faith in the future and his will to live had become paralyzed and his body fell victim to illness -- and thus the voice of his dream was right after all." (Viktor Frankl, "Man's Search For Meaning," Washington Square Press, Inc., N. Y., 1963).

Faith And Power

The man had been doomed, not by his condition, but by his loss of faith and hope. That his situation was not hopeless is demonstrated in the survival of some of his fellow inmates. So it may be with us too. Someone has said that there are no hopeless situations, only men who have grown hopeless about them. Often our problem is not that we are in a hopeless situation, but that we have become hopeless about it. Having lost our faith in the future, we also lose our power in the present.

Several years ago I attended a church planning retreat in the mountains and discovered during the first night that I had not brought sufficient cover. If that has ever happened to you, then you will appreciate what I went through. I tossed and turned, continually arranging and rearranging the blankets; but regardless of what I did, I found I was too cold to go to sleep. It was a long, long miserable night. The whole week end seemed crammed into those few hours. I'll never forget the joy and thanksgiving with which I greeted the sound of the rooster as he greeted the first faint rays of light of the new day. Although reveille was still a little while off, I knew at last that the night was over.

Ended!

This was also the essence of the message of the Prophet of the Exile . . . The night is over! The night of Chaldean exile had been an ordeal for the people, a time of repentance, soul-searching, and renewal. But now that time was over: "Comfort, comfort my people, says your God. Speak tenderly to Jerusalem, and cry to her that her warfare is ended, that her iniquity is pardoned . . ." (Isaiah 40: 1,2).

They had lived in hope and now their hope was fulfilled. Isaiah was right. Soon afterward the people who wanted to were allowed to return to their homeland. They would enter the Promised Land a second time and begin again.

So it is that when we have hope, when we have renewal, the strength again is given. (Based on materials by the International Council of Christian Education, National Council of Churches of Christ. Released by Religious News Service.)

...togenarian Puts In 80th Crop

Mr. John Marshall Ferguson, almost 89 years of age, still puts in a full working day harvesting an acre of dark leaf tobacco. He figures he's put in at least 80 different harvests of leaf. He both smokes and chews tobacco, has spent a very little time in hospitals and says that "retirement" is not for him. Standing with him just outside the grading shed is his son Willie Ferguson.
